++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Some sunny spells and a few heavy showers.

Today:
Rather cloudy start for most with outbreaks of rain in far south and patchy rain in the north. Becoming brighter with sunny spells across central and western parts with occasionally heavy and perhaps thundery slow moving showers developing this afternoon.

Tonight:
Rather cloudy across northern and eastern Scotland with patchy rain then, in north, showers. Elsewhere, afternoon showers dying out then dry with clear spells developing.

Saturday:
Rain in southeast clearing through the morning. Northern and northeastern parts rather cloudy but much of Scotland bright with sunny spells and just the occasional mainly light shower.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Largely fine with sunny spells and a few showers Sunday and Monday with a cool northerly breeze. Sunny spells and showers too Tuesday, but more persistent rain later in west.
